

Workshop for teachers of P-12

Communicate, Collaborate & Create

Using online tools for learning

Learning in an online world suggests that our students should be learning anywhere at anytime. Teachers need to create learning environments and activities that enable this 'seamless' blend of 'inside / outside' classroom learning. No longer can we maintain the idea that the four walls of our classroom bound the learning space.

Come and join with like minded educators in exploring ways in which we can engage our students in communicating, collaborating and creating within the online world.

This interactive workshop will explore the capacities of online tools such as (but not limited to) blogs, wikis and podcasts, within an educational context.

In this 2 day workshop participants will:

- Explore how online tools can enhance learning in the classroom
- Design learning activities that embed online tools
- Debate the way children learn in an online context
- Experience social networking and its educational implications
- Create online products and tools that have agency for current and future learning experiences in your classroom
