

A new hub focusing on teaching in a 1:1 laptop situation.

This hub is designed for educators who want to develop their teaching practices for classes where each student has a laptop or for teachers who access a trolley of laptops that are used in a 1:1 learning situation. This hub would also suit schools that are considering going to a 1:1 program in an area of the school.

The aim of the hub is to enable groups of teachers from interested schools to design engaging and rigorous learning experiences for their students, whilst supporting one another in the learning. The hub caters for teachers in primary, secondary and special settings.

The ANSN has been at the forefront of rethinking schools and schooling in a changing world. The network fosters a cooperative learning environment based on an action research approach to learning.

Hub Aims:

- To build a learning and sharing community where ideas and good practice can be shared in a supportive environment
- To deliver a comprehensive training program so you will have confidence teaching where every student has access to a laptop
- To support student learning needs by exploring the opportunities for innovative teaching and learning using laptops
- To share and develop resources with other teachers to use back at school
